

Stéphane Justeau

Stéphane Justeau, PhD, is Professor of Economics and Head of Economics section at ESSCA School of Management in France, where he has been teaching for 14 years. He has taught also at the Pensacola University (Florida), Wright State University (Ohio), Southern Illinois State (Illinois) and ESSCA Budapest.

Conscious of the needs for quality in education, he acquired his teaching skills at the University of Lausanne (Switzerland), and then at the Open University (UK) where he just received a Postgraduate certificate in Academic practice in Higher Education. His main areas of research include Macroeconomics and Educational skills.

In 2010, Stéphane Justeau created the Department of Educational Skills and Support at ESSCA. The courses offered internally were very successful, so in 2012 the Institute of Pedagogy and Educational Support was created to train teachers/researchers in different institutions such as: the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the University of Lausanne (Switzerland), the University of Fez - Faculty of Sciences (Morocco), Columbia University (New York, USA), but also Grenoble Ecole de Management, Nantes, Bordeaux and Laval universities.
