

Roundtable discussion & reports from the groups

- What does the growing digital world really mean for the future of business schools? What will enable a business school to be relevant and thrive in this new era?
- In addition to providing managers with technical knowledge and skills, what else should we be evolving in our curricula and programmes to accommodate the growing digital world?
- When it comes to data analytics, what are business schools training students for? How to balance managerial (more qualitative) content with data driven, quantitative content?