

Jose Luis Abreu

Dr. Jose Luis Abreu has a Bachelor of Science Degree in Agriculture from The University of Southwestern Louisiana (USL), a Master of Science Degree in Agriculture from California State University (CSU), a Master's Degree in Business Administration (MBA) from the Rafael Urdaneta University in Venezuela, and a Doctorate Degree in Science (PhD) with a major in Management Science from Rafael Beloso Chacin University in Venezuela. His Doctorate Research was mainly focused on Supply Chain Management and Ethics in the Oil Industry. This unique professional combination of knowledge within the frames of Plant Science and Oil Industry has allowed him to develop an important expertise in the field of sustainability and business administration & management. In 1984, he was appointed Community College Instructor (Credential Valid for Life) by The California Community Colleges. He was the founder and director in Venezuela of the Fruticulture Research Center in Zulia State, which is still active. In 1990 he started working in the oil industry and was later appointed as Executive Director of EHCPEK Co. in the following fields: General Management, Human Resources Management, Finance Management, Purchasing and International Logistics. Ehcpepek is a sister corporation to Lufkin Corporation in Venezuela. Main Activities: Construction, Installation, Operation, Maintenance and Service of all kinds of Petroleum and Industrial Facilities. As an academic, He has published a number of books in the fields of philosophy and management science. He is currently the President and Rector of Spenta University Mexico and Research Professor at The State University of Nuevo León (Monterrey, Mexico) and a guest professor in several recognized Latin American Universities. Founder Chief Editor of the peer reviewed journal "Daena: International Journal of Good Conscience." Indexed in Ebsco, Open Access Journal and Globethics. He recently founded the Neuroeconomics Research Center in Monterrey, Mexico.