

Jiang Wanjun

Dr. Jiang Wanjun is Dean of Guanghua School of Management, Xi'an Campus; Doctoral supervisor and vice-director of Responsibility and Social Value Center of Guanghua. He once directed two national natural science foundation projects, one on the research of external governance mechanisms of corporate responsibility and the other on the research of the structural governance mechanisms of research universities and their productivity. He also directed two projects of the Beijing Philosophy and Social Science Foundation and several provincial and national projects of the Ministry of Science and Technology Department. He is the author of "The Study of China's Food Safety Risk Management," "The Research on Universities' Governance Structures and Mechanisms of Productivity Improvements: Based on the Theory of Knowledge Producers, Personal Points of View and Thinking," "The Development of Chinese International Competitiveness Report" and other works. He has published over 20 academic papers in professional magazines such as the "Journal of Management World," and "China Soft Science Magazine and Statistical Research Magazine." Four among these works have been reprinted in the full text of "Xinhua Digest."

In recent years, his research has been given awards such as the Ministry of Education, Humanities and Social Sciences' second prize for research achievement in economics, Peking University Humanities and Social Sciences' second prize for research, first prize for the National Scientific and Technological Progress, and second prize for Scientific Research Statistics. In addition, he was awarded as the best economics scholar by GE and the Commercial Bank of China Scholarship oversight committee at Peking University. Furthermore, he was awarded the Li Yining Service Award of Guanghua School of Management for being an excellent party member of Beijing University.

Dr. Jiang Wanjun has carried out numerous of foreign academic exchanges and cooperation as the visiting scholar of Northwestern University Kellogg, France Aix - Marcelo University Business School (IAE, Aix en Provence), the University of California Berkeley's School of Business (Fulbright Scholar, Fulbright Research Scholar) and the Clement Graduate University of the United States.