

Sergey Myasoedov

Sergey Myasoedov was born in Moscow, Russia on the 1st October 1954. He graduated (1977) and got PhD in Economics (1980) at the Moscow University of International Relations (MGIMO). He studied at Durham Business School, Great Britain (1991); Wharton Business School, University of Pennsylvania, USA (1992) and Harvard Business School, USA (1993). In 2000 he got his second PhD in Sociology at the Moscow State University.

Since 2011 he is Vice-Rector of the Russian Academy of National Economy and Public Administration (RANEPA), the biggest Russian University with 180 thousand students and 68 campuses. Since 1996 - Dean of IBS-Moscow – the leading management school of Russia, since 2010 - President of RABE (Russian Association on Business Education), Deputy Chair of The National Independent agency for business and management programs assessment, Chair of Expert Council on National management educational reform of the Russian Government.

Dr. Myasoedov is a member of International Advisory Boards of: CEEMAN, since 2010, Slovenia; AACSB International (branch of Europe, Middle East, Africa), since 2015, Holland; ETS (GRE, TOEFL), since 2015, USA; Antwerp School of Management (Belgium).

He published 9 research and text-books and more than 150 articles, conference presentations and interviews in the field of cross-cultural management, leadership; business and management education in Russia and the world; economic reforms in Russia and emerging economies. He teaches cross-cultural management and leadership trainings at IBS RANEPA and several leading business schools of Russia (Master-classes). He has experience of teaching at the undergraduate, graduate and executive-retraining programs as a visiting professor at several foreign business schools and training centers.