

Nikolaos A. Mylonopoulos

Nikolaos A. Mylonopoulos, PhD, is Associate Dean of Academic programs and Associate Professor of Information Systems at ALBA Graduate Business School at The American College of Greece.

Dr. Mylonopoulos teaches in the broader area of information systems, e-business and strategic information management. His recent research is focusing on mobile services and knowledge management. He collaborates with the Center of Advanced Learning Technologies at INSEAD on the development of advanced simulation-based learning experiences for developing soft competencies in change management, collaboration, crisis management and others. He teaches these subjects in executive education programs in Greece and abroad.

Since 2010 he serves as Associate Dean with responsibility for the entire portfolio of graduate degree programs, as well as marketing and communications. During the Greek crisis, he has led a successful turnaround, restoring enrollment above pre-crisis levels, tripling the number of programs, introducing innovative marketing strategies, implementing new technology infrastructures and organizational processes. Previously he had served as Associate Dean of MBA Programs, of the Applied Research and Innovation Projects Department and of the IT Department.

He has studied applied informatics at the Athens University of Economics and Business and holds a Doctorate from Warwick Business School. He has taught at the Athens University of Economics and Business, Warwick Business School, Birkbeck College (University of London), Loughborough University Business School and KEDGE Business School (formerly Bordeaux School of Management).

His research has been published in international peer-reviewed journals and has co-edited three books (Organizations as Knowledge Systems with H. Tsoukas (Palgrave 2004), Social and Economic Transformation in the Digital Era with G. Doukidis and N. Pouloudi (IGI Global 2003), and Modern Trends in Management with H. Tsoukas and V. Theoharakis (Kastaniotis 2008, in Greek)).

He has co-organized two large international conferences with enormous success (The Third European Conference on Organizational Knowledge, Learning and Capabilities, 2002 and The First International Conference on Mobile Business, 2002) and has chaired or co-chaired numerous conferences and conference tracks.

He has led several international research consortia and has participated in more than 20 national or European research projects in telecoms, e-commerce, mobile business, socioeconomic sciences, e-learning, and others. He consults large companies in Greece and abroad.
