

Meelis Kitsing

Meelis Kitsing is Rector and Professor at the Estonian Business School where he previously chaired Economics and Finance Department. He has worked as Research Director at the Foresight Center, a think-tank at the Estonian Parliament and as Higher Education, Research & Development and Economic Policy Adviser at the Strategy Unit of the Estonian Cabinet Office. Meelis has also served as Head of Economic Analysis at the Estonian Ministry of Economic Affairs and Communications and as the President of Estonian Economic Association.

His contributions on political economy of digitalization have been published by Transnational Corporations Review, Policy and Internet, Journal of Information Technology and Politics as well as by Springer Nature, IEEE, ACM, Leuven University and MIT Press. He has conducted research and taught at University of Massachusetts, National Center for Digital Government (US), George Mason University, Central European University, Harvard University, University of Connecticut, Stockholm School of Economics and other universities in Europe and in the United States. He has been quoted in the Financial Times, Economist, Reader's Digest, El Comercio and Postimees.

Meelis earned his PhD from the University of Massachusetts Amherst (US), his MALD as a Fulbright scholar from the Fletcher School at Tufts University (US) and his MSc as a Peacock scholar from London School of Economics (UK). Prior to his academic pursuits, he worked for multinational companies and was elected to two consecutive terms to the City Council of Tallinn, capital of Estonia.